For the Class of '68

It Was A Year of Trial

To the Junior class, 1967 was a year of increased responsibility and hard work. During the year every Junior became a part-time salesman attempting to sell magazine subscriptions and candy to raise money for the Junior-Senior Prom. Many Juniors were introduced to that unique phenomenon known as "team teaching". This class required many hours spent on reading Carl Becker, writing term papers and book reports, and studying for tests. On top of this they had to cope with the problems presented by English 11, advanced algebra, and the PSAT, MSAT, and Iowa tests.

The Class of '68 has made useful contributions to school activities. Juniors have been, in part, responsible for the high level of school spirit. Eleventh grade girls have made a very respectable showing in gymnastics and Junior boys have been relied upon to fill some key positions on the athletic teams.

It is our hope and belief that the Class of '68 will be able to provide the leadership necessary to accept the responsibility for the progress of W.H.S.
